Dissolving Electronics: Mitigating the E-Waste Problem?

photo by Peter Shanks via Flickr CC Among the concepts presented at the 247th National Meeting & Exposition of the American Chemical Society (ACS) were brain sensors and electronic tags that are capable of dissolving. In addition to this technology being a huge asset in the medical field, it would also be a great step [...]

China Busts 3 E-Waste-Smuggling Gangs

China is the world's largest importer of illicit electronic waste, receiving an estimated 8.8 million tons of the stuff each year despite having had bans on its importation in place since 2000. Recently, officials successfully seized over 79,000 tons of old computers, cell phones, and other electronics from 3 gangs—the largest single amount ever discovered [...]
